

For ballistic testing to the NIJ and military standards body armour is positioned over a clay backing having a specific stiffness. To achieve this precise stiffness (both across the test area and through its thickness), each clay block must be warmed to a unique temperature.

The most convenient system is Biokinetics' clay heating blanket. Each unit has independent temperature control for use at the storage table or at the target site and attaches quickly with hook and loop fasteners.

Download PDF